prints that tell a story

Our Mission

Your go-to sunny day sidekick, keeping you cool, protected, and effortlessly stylish! Since 2010, we've been crafting chic UPF 50+ activewear that shields you from harmful UV rays without cramping your style, or your game.

What's our secret? Lightweight, breathable fabrics packed with advanced Cooling technology that let you move like a pro. Whether you're crushing a pickleball match, perfecting your swing on the golf course, or soaking up the outdoors, SanSoleil's vibrant prints and versatile designs make every activity a win.

We believe life is better under the sun, and we're here to help you enjoy it with confidence, comfort, and flair. Because staying protected should never mean sacrificing style!

About the Designer

Alyssa Zebovitz is a Philadelphia based designer, with a BFA in Fashion Design and an MS in Textile Design. Originally from Southern California, she has been working in the fashion industry as a fashion and textile designer for fifteen years on both the east and west coast. Her print design work incorporates hand illustrations and fine art in a large variety of mediums and styles, while creating custom and high concept prints for her clients. She has designed for SanSoleil for the past twelve years, creating most of their artwork from scratch, as well as editing and coloring every print that goes into production.

In addition to designing and consulting, she also teaches fashion and textile courses at several universities including Thomas Jefferson University, Moore College of Art & Design, and the Rhode Island School of Design, all while taking care of her two small children.
